Findings and Recommendations

Key Findings

- Revenue Trends: The business experiences extreme seasonality, with a steady performance through the first three quarters of the year followed by a massive "Holiday Surge" in November.
- Top-Selling Products: The inventory is led by high-volume, low-cost "hero products" like the Regency Cakestand and Jumbo Bags, which drive the majority of transaction traffic
- High-Value Categories: While the UK is the volume leader, international markets, specifically the Netherlands and EIRE, represent higher-value transaction hubs due to wholesale-style purchasing patterns.
- Price Sensitivity: Causality testing confirms a clear inverse relationship between price and quantity, proving that the customer base is highly price-sensitive and responds better to volume-based value.

Business Recommendations

To optimize performance for the next year, the business should consider the following actions:

- Golden Quarter Preparation: Since November is the peak revenue month, inventory for "hero products" should be scaled up by late September to prevent out-of-stock scenarios during the holiday rush.
- Wholesale Expansion: Develop targeted loyalty programs or "Bulk-Buy" discounts specifically for the Netherlands and EIRE markets to capitalize on their high average order value.
- Strategic Pricing: Given the price sensitivity, use "Bundle Pricing" (e.g., Buy 5, Save 10%) rather than direct price increases to maintain high volume while protecting margins.
- Operational Cutoffs: Review the sharp December revenue drop; if this is due to shipping cutoffs, consider expanding local warehousing or express delivery options to extend the holiday sales window.
